Trustees to Make Decision Students March Tonight

by Michael Hohl
Editor-in-Chief

Tomorrow, the Board of Trustees, hopefully makes a decision very directly affecting the entire college. The contract and tenure of William Pedtke is by no means the only problem; the larger problem encompasses the direction and goals of Marian College. Questions concerning faculty members who might not be returning will be answered by the end of this week.

Tonight a Student March for peace and justice will assemble at Doyle Hall at 10:30 p.m. Fr. Patrick Smith will lead the march to Clare Hall and finally to the Chapel where Mass will begin at midnight. After Mass the vigil will continue for all interested students and faculty until after tomorrow's Board of Trustees meeting.

A RECAP

Yesterday the campus was showered with exclamations and/or declamations from the 'other side.' Two sets of mimeographed sheets indicated that their authors have little trust in the competence of their student leaders and little contact with the faculty and administration involved in the Pedtke situation.

Last Wednesday evening the Student Board approved a plan of action for the week. The plan included a student forum on the Pedtke case Thursday and Mum Day, Friday. At the Board meeting, Stephen McCracken, president of the Alumni Association, asserted that 'the alumni have a greater stake in Marian than the students.' McCracken did not want to take sides in the controversy now ravaging the campus. 'We don't like what we see on either side...I'm concerned about what Marian College is going to be after this turmoil is over.' Unfortunately, McCracken never came to grips with the problem. He seemed somewhat confused about the difference between money and academic freedom.

Thursday before the forum, Fr. Patrick Smith, chairman of the Theology Department, announced his resignation in a special edition of the Carbon. At the forum, John Mahoney and Michael Miller announced their intentions to maintain a vigil for peace and justice, in the chapel, until today's Board of Trustees meeting. Subsequently, Mahoney and Miller have been joined by George Buessem. Some students have also participated in the vigil round the clock since Thursday.

Thursday evening, speakers at the Black Rally indicated that the black community was aware of and in sympathy with the Pedtke case.

Friday was Mum Day. Total silence was suggested on this day by the Student Board. The effort was only mildly successful. Friday's Carbon brought Russell Hargus' letter stating that he would resign if Mr. Pedtke was not given tenure and if Dr. John Kraus, chairman on the Philosophy Department, did not resign.

Faculty reaction to this case is mixed. Sr. Adele Zahn's departure, or exile, from the college led one instructor to note, 'Sr. Adele probably did leave for health reasons. The problem is whose.'

Another teacher is not holding classes until Sr. Adele returns. He says he has the same sickness she does.

Most faculty are silent about their feelings—to students at any rate. Some appear completely indifferent; others are still worried about the professional ethics involved in letting students know about the Pedtke affair. One instructor observed, 'If they can do it to Pedtke, they can do it to anyone.'

We are faced, apparently, not with the issue of one assistant professor of philosophy but with a far more transcending one: How arbitrarily can the president of an institution exercise his authority over lesser administrative offices, faculty and students? This is the issue that will determine which faculty members stay and for how long. This is the issue that will determine the image of the college. This is the issue that will determine what kind of students will enroll in Marian College.

In the handling of the more immediate problems of Mr. Pedtke, one might observe that if students had not found out about the situation, this man would have been summarily swept under the rug with no one the wiser. This type of bureaucratic procedure goes on in any number of institutions across the country.

JOHN MAHONEY AND MICHAEL MILLER, co-editors of the Carbon, maintain their continuous vigil for peace and justice. Mahoney and Miller have been in the chapel since Thursday afternoon. George Buessem joined them Sunday morning. Several students have also joined them daily for the vigil.

Academic Forum To Meet Tuesday

The Student Academic Affairs Committee will sponsor an academic freedom forum Tuesday, Mar. 3, in the Marian Hall Auditorium from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The theme of the forum is 'Academic Freedom and/or the Role of the College.'

Statements will be delivered by D.J. Guzzetta, president, and Sr. Norma Rocklage, acting academic dean. Committee members are looking into the possibility of having a trustee make an additional statement.

Two major speeches will be delivered by faculty members. Sr. Elizabeth Pellman, English instructor, is one of the speakers; the other has not yet been announced. The speeches will be followed by panel discussions. Each panel will be composed of two faculty members and two student representatives, including Fr. Paul A. Dooley, Jack O'Hara, Sr. Marilynn Hofer and David White, Michael Smith, Robert Hasty, Linda Scott and Susan Mennel.

Caf Workers Hours Cut

Due to a significant drop in enrollment of dorm students this semester and a drop of approximately $900 in the cafeteria's weekly income, several cafeteria workers have had to accept the loss of working hours. Dormitory enrollment declined by 56 students second semester.

The measures pursued by Barry Lloyd, cafeteria manager, are for the over-all good. With the cut of a few hours Mr. Lloyd is able to keep the complete working staff on his payroll. There is also no significant wage loss since the minimum wage law was increased in February.

Students To Visit England, Guatemala

On July 16, 1970, Marian College will send a delegation of three students and one teacher to Oxford, England, to study under the Studitrips foreign studies program. Students who plan to attend this excursion are Lynn Schwartz, Meg Schroeder, and Dave Soots, all juniors. Miss Emilie Murray, of Marian's English Department, is chaperone.

The trip will consist of four weeks of study with credits in many diversified fields. Among the courses available are literature, drama, social studies, and science. Students will plan their own field of study and credits will be applicable to future degrees. Besides the four weeks spent at Oxford, the group will tour several European countries, including Italy, France, and Switzerland. The approximate cost of the entire trip will be eight hundred dollars.

Lynn Schwartz, an English major, will be studying twentieth century literature during her stay at Oxford. Meg Schroeder will concentrate her efforts in the field of science, while Dave Soots will also exert himself in the field of Literature.

Miss Murray plans to engage in private reading and study of the teaching methods at Oxford. She expressed a great desire to see London (which is only fifty miles away) and to visit the theater. The Shakespearean festival at Stratford will run during the time and Miss Murray hopes to attend on weekends.

Transportation by jet will provide the students their trans-

Atlantic passage. Students attending this program will be housed by English families, thus adding to their understanding of English culture and customs.

There is still room for two to four more students who are interested in European travel and those courses listed above. To apply see Miss Murray in Sac 7.

Five Marian College students—Terry Miller, Kay Fleetwood, Mimi Meyer, Linda Turk, and Mary Sweeny—will visit Guatemala this June. Four of these students have participated in teaching Columbian students during their visit last fall. During their stay, the students will reside with families in Guatemala City while attending the University of Guatemala. A tour of the coun-

Letters to the Editor

A Mass of Paradox Surrounds Us

Today, a mass of paradox surrounds us. The core of our unrest, whatever 'side', is clung to with almost desperate bigotry as we call for 'peace' out of the other side of our mouths.

Our college is involved in a struggle between administrators, faculty, and students and each against one another. But it is not people we seem to be worried about. Procedures, technicalities, trivia are the criteria for judging one's competency and 'side'. Every act in this situation has been judged by this diseased criteria for value. This sickness is running to the very heart of our community and may soon destroy us. Unless there is a change Marian will inevitably die.

The questions whether Mr. Hargus' letter is eth-

Students Qualified to Decide?

We, seniors who have attended Marian for the past four years, are deeply concerned about the problems which the college presently faces. We have watched as one faculty member, whom we admire, has sought to reverse a seemingly inevitable decision of the administration of the college. To do this he has capitalized on his own personal charisma and popularity and aroused many students to his aid. These students now believe that theirs should be the power of deciding whether this particular faculty member stays or goes.

We maintain that the right of hiring and firing teachers belongs to the Board of Trustees of Marian College, not to students. We should not like to be a part of an academic community where faculty members are chosen by student popularity contests or where the trustees of the college are pressured into their decisions by student unrest. It is our belief that Dr. Guzzetta has attempted to prevent such a situation from occurring. To this end we applaud him.

Mr. Pedtke is a gifted teacher, but he is no god. To attempt to make him into one through Mao-like armbands and the psychology of pep rallies is to obscure the basic issues at stake here. Do we students possess the necessary qualifications to decide who should or should not be granted tenure by the administration of the college? Have not our visions of Pedtke the teacher been blurred by ical or not, whether students have a right to question or not, whether Michael and myself are 'desecrating' the sanctuary or not, whether arm bands etc. are bad or good are not the questions at hand. These are all expressions of concern for justice. They are all non-violent means utilizing human rights institutional people so often forget they have.

The concern is over a situation where no justice is apparent to date, only judgments based on trivia. Unless we change our judgment basis from the mechanics to the essence of a college Marian will become a shell of academia enclosing within it bigotry, ignorance, and disease. The choice is ours. It is very sad that we haven't been able to see that.

our visions of Pedtke the humanitarian? Can we look deeply into our consciences and say that we know more about these matters than people who have devoted a lifetime to them?

The results of Wednesday's Board of Trustees meeting may create a chasm of unrest so deep that it cannot be repaired. The side that loses will no doubt go on fighting. It is our belief that reason not fanaticism or emotion should govern the actions of all concerned. Reason cannot exist where there is a blind follow the leaders attitude. We ask each individual to analyze any contemplated acts within the morality of his own conscience. Let us know what academic freedom and truth really are before we use them as our slogans.

Lastly we are concerned that the Board of Trustees may make their decisions without stating publicly the facts. We believe that these facts should be revealed as the reason for whatever decisions are made. Although we should not be the ones to make such decisions we must know why they were made if we are not to be left dangling at the end of a rope of mystery.

The future of Marian College is at stake.

Some Accused of Holy War Tactics

To the Students of Marian College:

I have tried to remain neutral in the matter of William Pedtke's tenure. I am maintaining this position because it is a faculty-administration relationship, and I as a student, not presently aware of all aspects of the issue, do not have the right to prejudice anyone. Thus I find myself at variance with a portion of the student body and its representative board. A number of people have organized a 'holy war' on behalf of Mr. Pedtke. I admire their dedication to a cause but I am appalled by their tactics. Among the weapons of this 'crusade' have appeared armbands, a day of silence, a quasi-Shakespearean diatribe, etc. At best these prove nothing and individually can be dismissed as intellectual poor taste. However, taken together in pattern they symbolize a total disregard for one of civilized man's most cherished possessions, the right of due process of law. Mr. Pedtke's case is being processed under the Board of Trustees and they will soon render their decision. Until then the information involved must remain confidential. This is the responsibility of Dr. Guzzetta as delegated to him by the Board of Trustees. In honoring this obligation the President has been subjected to a great deal of abuse. Certain groups have seized the opportunity to attack knowing that he is obliged not to defend himself at this time.

I am particularly distressed with the support given to these retrograde methods by many of our so-called campus thinkers. Many of these people are students of philosophy, students in whom logic and objectivity should be ingrained in as a second nature. It appears that out of intellectual sloth they have abandoned the analytic, impartial approach of man's intellectual heritage in favor of crowd-pleasing emotional displays. Mr. Pedtke's allies claim they have an excellent case to present to the American Association of University Professors. I suggest that all parties wait until the Board of Trustees pass upon Mr. Pedtke's tenure. If passed upon favorably, he will have won a most economical battle. Alternately, if they find against him, he will have official recourse to the A.A.U.P.

The matter of academic freedom is a central issue of this conflict. Within the framework of Marian's stated goals and purpose, many students fail to distinguish between freedom and license. Many persons claim that Marian's activities are being carried on in an environment of dictatorship. In view of our school's private status, I feel logically compelled to point out that the existence of the Pedtke conflict and its attendant protest activities patently denies the charges of administrative dictatorship. Marian students have not yet had the experience of being persecuted.

Finally, I am disappointed in the response of a number of faculty who have threatened to summarily resign if Mr. Pedtke is not given tenure. I hope that as scholars in an educational institution, they have something more significant to contribute to Marian than their departure from its problems.

In closing I would like to commend all those who actively support their moral convictions, for this is infinitely more desirable than any vegetation. It is essential though, that truth and honesty provide the basis of moral belief. The use of reason, and stable formal procedure is the mark of the genuine truth seeker. Because of the magnitude of this problem and the consequences of our response, it is imperative that we maintain a sense of rational propriety in seeking a just solution. I realize that in the heat of this issue a number of people will not like, nor agree with, what I say, but I challenge them, in good conscience, to deny the truth of what I have said.

Campus Talent Exposed

The MC Review, Marian Players' annual talent show, will take the stage Sunday at 8 p.m. Admission is $.50.

The show will expose diverse campus talent. The White River Revival (CCGJTJ) will make its debut. Lynn Howard will sing, 'How Insensitive.' An interpretive dance will be presented by the Pages. Veteran Players, Barb Bates and Linda Scott, are scheduled. The Acting Technique Class will present two of Pinter's Review Sketches, Request Stop and The Applicant. The remainder of the program will be revealed in the course of the evening.

According to Players' president, Gayle Steigerwald, 'The MC Review will be different this year, employing an experimental format. One set—a found object set—will be used for all acts. A range of new media will be utilized.'

Inquiries Answered

February 23, 1970

To the Students of Marian:

In answer to inquiries and to avoid rumors, I wish to announce that it is my intention to remain in the English Department until June 1971. Recent events have made it clear that I cannot fully support the administrative policies of Marian; yet I will accept a contract and stay one year to assist my department in maintaining some stability. The English department has already accepted two resignations and given one member sabbatical leave for next year. Under these circumstances I feel an obligation to the majors, to my department chairman and to the academic profession to continue in my present role.

Combining my student years and my teaching years, I have a decade of my life invested in this college. To leave Marian is to fully realize the transitory nature of all human endeavors; to leave is to acknowledge that there are other centers of human effort which are important. To leave is to once again push against the rock, always denying and always accepting that it is an endless and futile struggle up the slope.

'As for Sisyphus, we must imagine him happy.'

Lugar Formulates New Government

Unigov Inaccessible Now

The cities of the United States face a growing crisis in that their governments were created in and for a less complicated age. City and county governments often overlap with chaos and inefficiency in metropolitan government as the result. To correct these deficiencies the city of Indianapolis has been experimenting with a new form of city-county government, called Unigov, since January 1, 1970.

The driving force behind Unigov (unified government) was Indianapolis Mayor Richard Lugar. On Nov. 27, 1968, Lugar appointed a 26-member Government Organization Task Force to draw up plans for a consolidated system of local government. The task force was co-chaired by Thomas C. Hasbrook, President of the Indianapolis City Council, and Beurt R. Ser Vaas, President of the Marion County Council. Membership on the task force was made up of business and civic leaders of Indianapolis and Marion County.

On Mar. 13, 1969, the recommendations of the task force became law with the signing of Senate Bill 543 by Governor Whitcomb. This law creates a Consolidated City of Indianapolis. Only three areas in Marion County—Beech Grove, Lawrence, and Speedway, are excluded from the Consolidated City.

The Unigov law provides for a city-county council of 29 members, of which 25 are elected by districts and four at large. This council has legislative and budgetary powers. The mayor will now be elected county wide and he will appoint a deputy mayor with the approval of a majority of the city-county council. Many of the old overlapping independent agencies are combined into a cabinet system of six administrative departments. The six departments include administration, metropolitan development, public works, transportation, public safety, and parks and recreation.

Unigov is financed principally by property tax receipts and receipts from the State's Motor Vehicle Highway Account Fund. Mayor Lugar has reported that he expects property taxes to be lower under Unigov than before, but this is probably political salesmanship.

The month and a half during which Unigov has been in operation is not long enough to assess it as a success or failure. If it is to be a success it must meet the problem of suburbanites who have left the decaying inner city but in commuting still uses its facilities without paying for them. Progress must be made in slum clearance and urban renewal in the inner city of Indianapolis. While these and other goals are accomplished the suburbanites must be kept happy because they are supplying the expanded tax base which makes new projects possible.

Mayor Richard Lugar, the architect of Unigov, has everything to gain by its success. He has spent a good portion of his first term formulating and implementing the new government. If he can demonstrate to Indianapolis and other cities that metropolitan government is more efficient and economical than city government, it will be copied across the country. Lugar has already indicated that he will run for re-election in 1971 to provide a test for the popularity of Unigov.

Drum and Bugle

Marian's Drum and Bugle Corps has begun selling tickets to an Indianapolis Pacer game. Proceeds from the tickets, which are for the Pacers' Mar. 18 game, will help finance the Corps' annual spring trip.

Other fund-raising activities include a raffle with a tape deck as prize. Another source of funds will be the soliciting of donations from people in the community who have previously supported the Corps.

Pending expected acceptance of their application, members of the Corps hope to be in Memphis, Tennessee, May 14-17.

Club Elects Boosters

Marian College Booster Club has opened a new season with the election of officers for 1970. These are: Steve Drake, president; Joan Rikke, vice president; Regina O'Connor, secretary; and, Dick Wilhelm, treasurer.

The Booster Club is Marian students united to promote school spirit and athletic events. Although the entire student body shares membership in the Booster Club, actual membership is held by the representatives who are elected by other members in their freshman year, and serve a four year term. Each class has six representatives, three women and three men.

Booster Club also has a representative from the cheer leaders, two from M-Club, and one from WARA.

A mixer is the Booster Club activity looming in the near future. The club is also responsible for the annual field day held in the spring. The major activities are centered in the Homecoming festivities.

The 1970 Booster Club has two aims for this year. The most important is an intensified effort to obtain support and publicity for Marian sports, especially for the spring sports, baseball and track. The club also hopes to establish a more efficient 'cut-system' for the purpose of weeding out representatives who fail to do their jobs.

Two elections are coming in the Booster Club itinerary, the annual election of a new faculty advisor, and the election of a new sophomore representative.

The new Booster Club officers wish to stress that they are always open to suggestions concerning any of the clubs.

MH Sends Help Plea

On today's college campus and in today's world there is great emphasis on involvement on helping others, on giving of oneself. This emphasis is reiterated at Marian through UpBeat, Christamore House, Girls' School, Mental Health activities and private endeavors. Yet, this involvement is near death in one branch of the Mental Health Club.

The Club has approximately sixteen students interested in volunteer work at Central State Hospital. But their potential for involvement has been stifled by lack of transportation. On Monday and Wednesday nights, they earnestly seek drivers, but letters, phone calls, and personal requests have been snubbed by students with cars. Col. L. Wagner, controller, has been concerned and helpful, but school cars cannot be used, because Mental Health Club has no advisor—it was orphaned upon the leave of Mrs. Kathryn Wagner. Also, it would not be fair to other clubs if MH monopolized the car two nights a week. The club has even considered buying a car, but UpBeat's problem with insurance and maintenance has steered MH from that idea.

Great opportunities for learning and giving are slowly drifting away. Mental Health Club is desperately appealing to the students with cars and to the faculty and Sisters. Students and an advisor would greatly assist the Central State patients by donating one hour out of a 168-hour week. A segment of Mental Health Club is dying. Will anyone help? Volunteer drivers may contact Leacarl Kneuen, ext. 511, or Linda Smith, ext. 415.

Counselors Available

Two intern counselors from the Indiana University School of Educational Counseling Department are on campus this semester to complement Marian's counseling services. These counselors are available on Wednesdays for academic, vocational, or personal counseling.

Seniors interested in employment or graduate school are encouraged to take advantage of their services.

Appointments can be made in the Student Services Office, located in the SAC building. If a student finds a daytime interview inconvenient, an evening appointment might be arranged. Those interested may call at the Student Services Office of phone Ext. 262.

Nobel Winner Gives Trips

try is scheduled for the first week of their seven week stay. The remaining six weeks will be spent at the University. An arrangement is sought with the Maryknoll sisters to enable the students to teach at a summer school for poor children.

Sr. Mary Edgar, the co-ordinator for this program, expresses a desire that the studies undertaken at the University of Guatemala will include Guatemalan music, art, and folklore. The students will then have an opportunity to see a more complete picture of the Guatemalan culture,' stated Sr. Edgar. While in Guatemala Sr. Edgar has, among her research and teaching arrangements, plans to interview Mr. Angel Miguel Asturias, who is financially sponsoring the program. Mr. Asturias won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1967. Sr. Edgar hopes to collect enough data to be able to write his biography.

Preliminary arrangements will be made March 25 through Apr. 5, when Sr. Edgar and Miguel Asturias, a Marian College student and grandson of the Nobel Prize winner, visit Guatemala.

Perc Cabarets

Frequenters of the Perc, Marian's downstairs student union, may soon notice a gradual metamorphosis of decor. The Art Club, with President Paula Recko and advisor Sr. Dolorita, has undertaken the task of changing the bare atmosphere into that of a cabaret.

According to Paula, the new effect will be a closer darker atmosphere. The redecorating should be completed by the end of the semester.

Although the actual plans will be altered slightly during the process of renovation, a number of major changes are definitely planned. Two large stained glass windows will replace all of the others, and railroad signal lamps will be used. Burlap and nets, in addition to a single panel of wood cross-hatching, will cover the walls. Senior Betty Johnson is designing a large mobile to be hung in the center of the Perc.

The idea to redecorate came after the Art Club had worked on designs for the coffee houses, held in the adjacent SAC Lounge. The renovation is done on weekends in conjunction with the SAC Renovation Committee, headed by Mr. Walter Fields, Mrs. Linda Kolb, Colonel Wagner, and Mr. Jack O'Hara.

The Art Club members encourage individuals and members of other clubs to assist in creating a new, atmospheric Perc.

Marian Knights Defeat Anderson 86 - 84

MIKE RIESEN ISN'T DISPLAYING a new free throw position. Pat McKenney helps him look for a contact lense which he lost during Saturday night's last home game.

by John Dickerson

Before a large crowd at Reynolds Fieldhouse the Marian College Knights defeated Anderson College in the last home game of the 1969-70 roundball season. It was the last game in front of the home fans for Coach Cleon Reynolds' three senior lettermen, Pat McKenney, Tim Berger and Mike Komlanc.

In the first half Mike Riesen proved to be the sparkplug of the team, hitting for 14 markers at forward. The Knights, although stymied early in the contest, entered the lockers at half time with a 45-40 lead. They never trailed after this, and maintained their lead steadily for a 84-86 win. To the Knights credit was their poise under Anderson's desperate pressure defense, and Steve Drake's jump shots iced the game for Marian. The team's leading scorer, Randy Stahley, tallied only 14 points.

After the game senior president John Wiles presented the squad's three seniors with plaques commemorating their college careers. The Knights travel to Indiana Central to play the Greyhounds tonight.

Jwan -tu - wjazuri Win Title

by Jim Prysiazny

The Jwan-tu-Wjazuri, which in Swahili means beautiful people, defeated the Gods of Hellfire by a score of 72-61 in Sunday's intramural basketball championship game. Members of the Jwan-tu-Wjazuri team are Bill Smith, Terry Smith, Richard Geaiter, Byron Walker, Butch Washington, Roger Lyons, Tony Smith and Calvin Mitchell.

Excitement raged throughout this game in which both teams battled to the very end.

The speed of Rich Geaiter and Terry Smith, the excellent outside shooting of Byron Walker and Butch Washington, and the fine rebounding of Bill Smith gave the champs an edge over their worthy opponents.

The half time score proved how close a game this was, with the scoreboard showing a mere four points separating the two terms. However, in the second half the 'beautiful people' exploded and finished defeating their foes by a strong 11 points.

Butch Washington lead the Jwan-tu-Wjazuri netting 23 points, seconded by Bill Smith with 18. Tom Babione with 19 points and Joe Hoog with 16 were high men for the Gods of Hellfire.

In a preliminary game, which was a battle for last place, the ATP defeated the Cellar Dwellers by a score of 32-20. It was the first win of the season for the ATP. Jim Prysiazny led the ATP netting 12 points. Jim En-trikin led the Cellar Dwellers with 10 points.

Hoosier Skiers Skid

Approximately 150 miles North of Indianapolis in the intolerably flat Hoosier hinterland lies the somewhat less than fashionable Mount Wawasee. The 'Mount' turned out to be a molehill. This, however, was unknown to our sleepy-eyed students racing the sun with their $11.00 package plan tucked under their arms and visions of snow-capped mountains and schushing skis dancing through their heads.

The trip up, for those of us 'lucky' enough to travel by auto was lengthy, but enjoyable. Our adventurous spirits couped up for so many months in Indy sent our eyes careening about the countryside searching for new sights and thrills. The northern Hoosier habitat was not about to let us down. Our capabilities to comprehend new sights were saturated by towns like Strawland, Aroma, Wabash, Jopola, New Paris, and an unknown town that possessed a gas tank proclaiming to be the geographic 'Heart of Hoosierland.'

Entering New Paris, the ski Capitol of Indiana, we scanned the horizon of the now infamous 'Mount Wawasee.' Noticing a small, elevated patch of snow in the distance, we realized we were nearing our destination. Stopping at a nearby farm for directions, we discovered much to our chagrin that the parch of snow we had seen from a distance was in reality a snow-capped ant hill, Mount Wawasee. Descending into a mud filled quagmire (the parking lot, but then what can you expect from a north forty) we proceeded to the 'chalet' at the foot of the 'Mount.' It would have added to the atmosphere if they had removed the chicken wire and feathers when they had redecorated the obviously elderly building. While inside we received word that the now infamous Marian but had bussed its last load. Completely disappointed, we left, in the words of that great American, 'with a heavy heart,' which was probably due to the chili purchased at the snack bar.

After returning to Marian we overheard one student quip about the trip 'it was really on the level.'

Representation to Board Suggested

Finally, the incident points up the need for the Board of Trustees to be more familiar with the students and faculty of the college. A positive and necessary step in this direction would be a student and a faculty representative on the Board of Trustees; or at least two members who may speak for these respective groups. Certainly members of the Board of Trustees should come to the campus regularly to become acquainted with students and faculty and their problems.
